November 2022

TOP: the Alliance's new house, now being renovated, front view; BOTTOM: view of the National Alliance's primary entrance from the shop above the garage. Our neighbor's upscale home is seen across the road. Eventually, another small spring-fed pond to the left of the entrance will match the one on the right. Trees and other landscaping to make our members proud will be added as we can afford them.

Construction Progress, Alliance Property in Tennessee

Since we only have one construction crew here on staff we concentrated on completing the front of the “fixer-upper” that was on the parcel we purchased in March (pictured). That meant suspending work on the book warehouse during November except for the local mason we brought in to apply stone to the front. We will feature that in a future issue of the BULLETIN. There is plenty of work to do this winter inside, in both buildings.

The newly purchased house was so overgrown and run down that folks were saying it should be bulldozed. But we could see that, with its sound foundation and frame, it just needed renovating. Perry, Doug, Ray, Mike, and occasional help from Alliance volunteers have whipped it into shape — the front part entirely. The remainder of the house is stabilized. The entire front porch was demolished and replaced; a new front wall was constructed with new siding, door, windows, shutters. The dormer upstairs has new siding, a new window and a sturdy roof that should last many decades. Guttering that matches the charcoal gray roof will be added shortly to further enhance the house’s “curb appeal,” as the Realtors say.

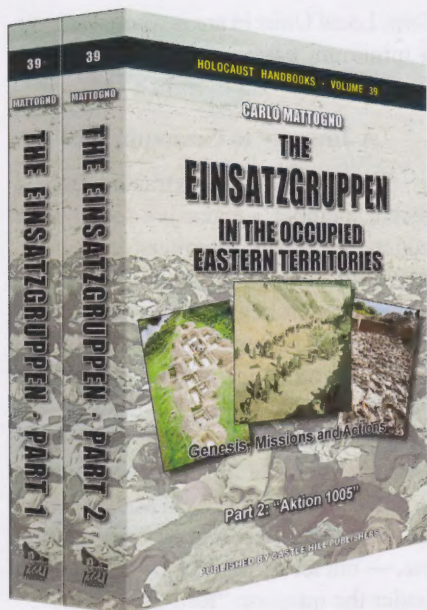

New National Alliance Postcard

The 4x6-inch card illustrated on the next page, with its positive message of White natality, is suitable for mailing as a postcard with a 44-cent postage stamp, or for handing out or placing wherever our people will see it. One is included with each copy of this month’s BULLETIN.

Cosmotheist Books

Four new titles have been added to our cosmotheistchurch.org bookstore this month: Our Nordic Race, a rare reprint of the 1958 collectible classic by Richard Kelly Hoskins, an early racialist attempt to provide a history of the White race; The Age of Alexander: Nine Greek Lives, the 1973 Penguin Classic edition, by classical Greek historian Plutarch; includes his biography of Alexander the Great along with those of eight other famous Greeks from the same crucial phase of ancient history; Greek Gods and Goddesses, the Dover Classic coloring book for children by John Green and Drew Silver, 2001 — large format, has 21 attractive and challenging drawings, and the information conveyed about Greek mythology is said to be more accurate than that found in other books.

Our featured title this month, published in 2022, is by Carlo Mattogno, The Einsatzgruppen in the Occupied Eastern Territories, volumes 1 & 2, hardcover (no dust covers). On 22 June 1941, National Socialist Germany set out to destroy what it saw as a menace to the world: Judeo-Bolshevism in its most threatening manifestation, the Soviet Union. As the German Army marched east, certain special units called Einsatzgruppen (task forces) were deployed behind the front. Mainstream historians maintain that their primary task was to exterminate as many Jews as possible. This study takes a critical look at the Einsatzgruppen’s activities and missions. Documents exist attesting to mass executions of Jews in the temporarily German-occupied Soviet territories, but the accuracy of the data contained in them is questionable, as mainstream scholars admit. Unlike all other works published so far on this topic, revisionist historian Mattogno analyzes the known facts with a critical mind and a common-sense approach.

Correspondence

I don't like moneybags. They were always a sleazy bunch, but now more than ever. You can't be a wealthy man and at the same time be honest and morally uncorrupted in the Jew-dominated globalist economic system. [Elon] Musk and his ilk try to balance among various political and social forces. Yes, Musk would donate millions of dollars to White nationalist groups if they acquired the ability to cause real pain to creatures like him. But never before.

It is the same on a local level. I have experience in dealing with local businessmen on questions of financial support for a political group. The only thing that they consider is your real abilities, your potential to do real damage. If this potential is zero, not a single moneybag ever gives you a dime. But when you have that potential, they give. The more this potential, the greater are the gifts. When nationalist groups in Russia possessed real strength, businessmen paid. But when the Putinist system effectively crashed the whole organized structure of the [ethnic Russian nationalist] movement, the moneybags withdrew their support at once. Now no one gives Russian nationalists anything (in Russia). The only financial support for Russian nationalists now is from businessmen in Ukraine — because, there, Russian nationalist groups are armed and fighting against Putinist forces.

It is a very simple power equation. Yes, creatures like Musk would pay, but the only reason they pay is to save their asses and to provide for various future eventualities. I don't believe in the possibility of a moneybag having any kind of elevated spiritual motives. It is highly unlikely; it is even less likely than growing palm trees on the shores of the Arctic. Musk will pay racially conscious Whites only when he starts to fear them; so far he doesn't fear. — Wolf Stoner, Russia via nationalvanguard.org

Chairman Williams responds: You've hit on a reason why rich White Americans (moneybags, if you prefer) do not support our Alliance: they simply do not fear us; they go with what they see as the "smart money." At this early stage in our revolution — the educational stage — we are not in any position to inspire fear. We want to give our people hope, and instill in them the courage to join with us, speak our truths, and name the enemy without fear of the “racist” smear — not have them fear us. The enemy fears us, though, telling our people again and again that the National Alliance is “the most dangerous hate group.” What our propagandized people ought to fear now is what will happen to them if we do not organize effectively to resist the treacherous Jews and their agenda.

Season’s greetings dear folks of NA: I hope this finds everyone well. If I could buy one of those lots mentioned in last month’s BULLETIN, I would. The thought of living in our community is one thing that keeps us going. One day my daughter and I will be there, but currently my elderly parents require much of my time and they are in no condition to move, so we stay put. Meanwhile, if there are trusted members in the Nashville area feel free to forward my contact information to them. I’d be interested in starting or joining an Alliance Local Unit as described in the October BULLETIN. Yours truly, — L.L., Tennessee

Chairman Williams responds: We wish you and your family an enjoyable Yule season as well, L.L. There will certainly be a place here in our physical community when the time is right for you. I suppose it was wishful thinking on my part to expect a member or two to snap up an available lot adjacent to our Alliance property when we have so few members currently. They are still available for the time being. As for forming a Local Unit of the Alliance, we have strict, careful minimum requirements for that. I expect to have a full-time Membership Coordinator on staff here at the National Office soon who will work with me and all of our members; eventually we will form Local Units in areas where we have a minimum concentration of members like you who want to form a Unit.

A Journey to Cosmotheism

The following is extracted from a recent member’s extensive seven-page addendum to his Membership Survey. It would be nice if we could receive such a comprehensive résumé of every member’s life experience so we could know you all better, but we know that’s not always possible. N.G.’s work experience and education are impressive enough: multiple Associate in Applied Science degrees; a B.A. in Mathematics; an M.A., and two years of law school, etc. — but let’s simply share what he put under the question “Religion, if any”:

To NA: This question is interesting, and a bit challenging. I was born, baptized, and raised Catholic, and for much of my life I was a self-described “non-devout Catholic” (outwardly doing “all the right things”), but not really believing in the teachings and preachings of the Catholic faith). Later in life I renounced my Catholic faith and Catholicism entirely. Since then, I investigated other Christian denominations, including Baptist, Methodist, Lutheran, Evangelical Reformed, and Christian non-denominational, but was sorely disappointed in all. All the non-Catholic, Protestant denominations were somewhat akin to Catholicism, but without the exact same religiosity, meaning without Catholicism’s rigid beliefs in all sorts of supernatural, holy beings: saints, angels, the Blessed Virgin Mary, etc. I was also alienated from the various Baptist denominations by the willful hypocrisy of many in their congregations, and their overt belief in race-mixing and even miscegenation to the point that they not only accepted these things but fully supported both repugnant behaviors.

Finally, I pledged loose affiliation to the Christian Identity religion, somewhat spurred by a member of the League of the South who was a devout adherent of that faith. However, after study and research about Christianity and the damage it has done through the centuries to the White race — witness the collapse of the great Roman Empire that has been primarily attributed to the Jew-created Christian religion — I now feel abhorrence for all Christian denominations and their misguided teachings of passivity and even cowardice in the face of danger (e.g., “turn the other cheek”; “the meek shall inherit the Earth”; “love your enemies as yourself”; “we are all children of God”; “sell all your worldly possessions and give your earnings to the poor”; “there is only one race, the human race”; “But I say unto you, do not resist the one who is evil. But if anyone slaps you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also,” etc; ad nauseam). So, to answer the question about my religion, my answer, as of October 2022, is Cosmotheism....

In early summer 2022 I finished reading Cosmotheism: Religion of the Future by Dr. William L. Pierce. Reading it was so spellbinding and captivating that I finished the entire book in just three short evenings. I have since embarked on a journey that involves learning everything possible about Cosmotheism, because, from the standpoint of being a very racially conscious pro-White activist, a religion that is grounded in science and mathematics, and bases its teachings and builds its very foundations upon evolution, natural selection, pursuit of godhood, and development of the race-soul makes perfect philosophical, logical, and racial sense.... — N.G., North Carolina

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

Courage Is Contagious

It takes a measure of courage for many of us to openly speak to others about the beliefs we hold privately. This isn't physical courage; the ranks of soldiers and Marines are filled with men who are courageous physically, even valorous, but it takes moral courage for a White man to openly say today that he is sick of government-enforced homosexuality and race-mixing. (In today's Politically Correct military, those expressing such ideas would find themselves booted out quickly, regardless of courage.) Dr. Pierce's Chairman Williams responds: I first suggested to Dr. Pierce thirty years ago, when he named me his first National Alliance Membership Coordinator, that we have members fill out a survey form so we could get to know them better. He approved the idea. One of the questions I included was “Religion, if any,” which turned out to be revealing and helpful. Some were already claiming Cosmotheism, others were still Christian or agnostic or atheist. My favorite was, “I believe in god but he damn sure ain't a Jew.” N.G.'s response to that question is worth sharing with other members, as I believe it reveals the struggle many Whites have with Christianity, and illustrates a spiritual path forward through Dr. Pierce's teachings.

N.G. sees a distinction between race-mixing and miscegenation that I don't see beyond the latter's being a fancy 13-letter word for the former. We can discuss that during his planned visit to our National Office in December.

piece on this important subject, written 25 years ago and excerpted below, may seem a little dated with its mention of then-president Clinton, but his advice is timeless:

This fear of being Politically Incorrect has reached ridiculous dimensions. Take the widespread phenomenon of “White flight,” for example. Millions of White people are fleeing areas which have a high percentage of Blacks, Mexicans, and other non-Whites and are relocating to predominantly White areas. Sometimes this just means a move from city to suburb, or from one suburb to another; sometimes it means moving to another state or another region of the country with fewer non-Whites. But if you ask one of these flee-ers why he is fleeing, you will hear every sort of answer except the true answer. Hardly anyone will admit that he is moving to get away from non-Whites. He is terrified of being thought a "racist." I am sure that many of these flee-ers don't even admit their racial motive to themselves. I am sure that many of them feel pangs of guilt whenever they do think about their motives.

This is a deplorable situation, and it is an impressive proof of the enormous power of the mass media to brainwash the population. What George Orwell's "Ministry of Truth" did in the author's imagination, Time-Warner-CNN, Disney-ABC, and the other Jewish media conglomerates are doing in fact.... I am convinced that the reason White Americans have let themselves be backed into the corner they're in now is not because they're stupid: It's because they're lacking in the courage to say what they really believe, if they may be criticized for saying it.

I'm sorry to say that I've seen the same sort of timidity in myself. When interviewers have asked me whether or not I'm a racist, I have responded by asking, "Well, what do you mean by the word 'racist'?" I've tried to wriggle out of giving a direct answer to the question, because the Jewish media have made such an enormous investment in demonizing the label "racist" that one has to screw up one's courage a bit to come right out and say, "Yes, of course, I'm a racist."

These days anyone is a racist who refuses to deny the abundantly clear evidence that there are inherited racial differences in behavior, intelligence, and attitudes. A racist is a person who will not pretend that he sees no differences.... A racist is any White person who prefers to live among other Whites instead of among non-Whites and prefers to send his children to White schools. A racist is any White person who feels a sense of identity with, a sense of belonging to, his own tribe, his own people, his own race, and who shows an interest in his race's history, heroes, culture, and folkways — which is why Western civilization, European history, and other traditional, race-oriented curricula are being phased out at American universities and are being replaced with various "multicultural" offerings designed specifically not to stimulate racial feelings in the students. A White racist is a person who finds the members of his own race more attractive physically than members of other races and who is instinctively repulsed by the idea of racial intermarriage or by the sight of a White person intimately involved with a non-White.... A racist is a White person who is disgusted with the multiracial cesspool that America is becoming under the present government and media policies. A racist is so alarmed about the threat to the future of his people that he is willing to derail these policies — which is why the media and Mr. Clinton have become so shrill recently about the need to combat "hate criminals."

Courage: That is the key to our survival. Courage is more important than money, more important than intelligence, more important than friends or political and business connections. Unless we have the courage of our convictions, neither we nor our convictions will survive.

I don't believe that a coward can change his nature and become a hero, but I do believe that

"Before we can put the White Man
back in the fight,
we must first put the fight back in the White Man."

NATIONAL ALLIANCE

A tip o' the hat to our friend Martin Kerr for creating this graphic.

many of us who have let ourselves be intimidated and bullied because we didn't want to give offense, didn't want to be rude, didn't want to seem ungentlemanly, didn't want to be unpopular — I do believe that we can begin reasserting ourselves. We can begin finding a little bit of courage in ourselves, we can resolve that we will no longer be bullied into going along with the crowd when we know that the crowd is wrong. In my case, I have resolved not to refrain from speaking out whenever speaking out is the proper thing to do. I've resolved not to try to wriggle away from saying exactly what I believe when someone asks me whether or not I'm a racist. I believe that it would do many other people a lot of good to make a similar resolution. I believe that it would be good for their souls.

This doesn't mean that we have to be deliberately rude or offensive.... I am a racist, and as I said, there's no need to be rude about this, no need to use the "n word" or engage in name-calling. But we do need to be completely honest for a change, both with ourselves and with others. We need to have the courage to face the whole truth regarding our situation and what we need to do about it. That doesn't mean that every time I speak with an interviewer I have to tell him that we can't restore America to spiritual health until we restore her to racial health, and that means total, geographical racial separation. I don't have to mention all that, unless he specifically asks for it. But it does mean that I should not equivocate when asked whether or not I'm a racist. I should be as straightforward and direct and clear and honest as I can be.

I'll say just one more thing on the importance of having the courage to tell others what we believe. It's not just a matter of personal pride. It's not just a matter of being able to feel good, of being able to pat ourselves on the back because we weren't afraid to stand up to the media bosses. If we had shown more courage from the beginning, if we had spoken out the first time and every time the Jews and their collaborators had tried to implement their policies for changing America from a White republic into a multiracial garbage dump for the New World Order, I think the Jews would have found themselves some other country to subvert.... If we hadn't let ourselves be bullied and manipulated and backed into a corner, but had said what we believed from the start, I don't think we'd be in the mess we're in today.

Courage is catching; it's contagious. If a nation's leaders show courage, so will the ordinary citizens. But when the leaders are afraid to be honest, then you can't expect the ordinary citizens to be very courageous.... The racial mess we have in American society today is a consequence of the failure of courage on the part of our society's leaders. When the courage of our leaders fails, our whole society fails, and then we become the victims of the Jewish predators who control our media. The one thing that all of us can do about this now is to resolve that our own courage will not fail, that we will not be intimidated, but that we will stand up and speak out forthrightly.

Read more of this piece by Dr. Pierce at "The Importance of Courage" on nationalvanguard.org. Here is more from our National Alliance founder, without apology:

My Religion is a Racist Religion

...I hardly need to mention that my view of this matter is a racist view. The point I am making is a racist point. My patriotic and conservative friends who have not grasped this point have been trained to look at the world as individuals rather than as White men and women. Individualism is the new conservative religion, and it is really as disastrously wrong-headed a religion, as lethal a religion, as the religion of White guilt.... The individualist is as concerned about what sort of education Black, Mestizo, and Asian children receive as he is about the sort of education White children receive. In my religion the first commandment is, survive. Be fruitful and multiply. Grow strong, and safeguard the future of your children. And the second commandment is, seek the future among your own kind. Know that each race of man, each species of animal, must develop according to its own laws, according to its own nature. Understand the nature of your own people, and base your plans for the future, your plans for growing strong, your plans for a strong and healthy posterity, on that nature. Preserve your kind.

My religion is a racist religion. It does not require me to hate anyone of another race or to harm anyone of another race, so long as he does not threaten or impede my own race. But it does require me to always put the interests of my own people ahead of any other race's interests or any individual's interest, including my own. My religion is based on doing what comes naturally, on doing what my kind always have done — at least, what they did prior to the mass insanity which seems to have taken hold during [the 20th] century. When we did what was natural for our people we grew strong, and no other people could stand against us. But when we let the religion of White guilt begin setting our policies for us, we began getting the sort of lunacy... [that] gave us Bill Clinton in the White House. It gave us affirmative action, racial integration in our schools, and the immigration policy which is flooding our country with non-Whites.

I think that my conservative and patriotic friends agree with me on this. Having Bill Clinton in the White House is a disaster. It is not only a national embarrassment, but it is a grave national danger: it threatens the whole future of our country. And they agree with me that open borders, affirmative action, ...and the rest of the Clinton program are disasters for America, whether Clinton remains in the White House or not. But I part company with many of my conservative and patriotic friends when it comes to understanding why these disasters have been inflicted on us and what we should do about them. I hope that as our situation in this country worsens, some of them will come to understand that their religion of individualism cannot save us, cannot even slow the pace at which disaster is overwhelming our people on all fronts. I hope that they will understand that a religion based only on individual interests, based only on selfishness, not only cannot save our people, but it cannot even protect their own, personal interests in the face of the disaster which is overtaking all of us....

National Alliance Dues: Paying Ahead Helps Us

Lana Williams, our Alliance's Business Manager, reminds members and supporters who do not pay ahead on their monthly dues, then miss one or more months, that payments made after that will first be applied retroactively to arrears, not to the current month. Paying ahead quarterly, semi-annually, or annually, if one can afford it, helps us a lot with bookkeeping.

National Alliance Pendant Update: Last Chance to Order

Members have so far ordered 16 of the nice Life Rune pendants that were featured on page one of the October BULLETIN. Orders for more pendants will be accepted only through the month of December. Our National Office does not stock this specialty one-time-only item. So, if one is wanted for a Yule gift, please order right away.

From All of Us: Thanks and Good Yule!

The staff of the National Office wish all members and supporters and your families an enjoyable Yule season, and we thank you for your continuing support of Alliance-building. W. W. W.
